GO SOLAR NOW! Get Locked Into NEM 2.0 Before PG&E Switches To Net Energy Metering 3.0.

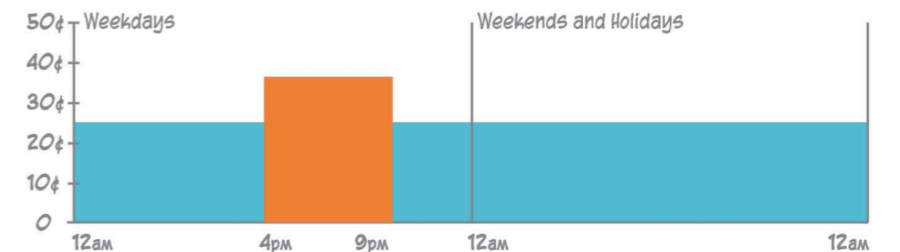

How long will NEM 2.0 be available?

It's hard to say, but probably not for too long. California's Public Utilities Commission is already engaged in deliberations with stakeholders, including the utility companies and the solar industry. A successor tariff is expected to be announced some time this year (2021).

June-September

Off-Peak Peak

Why Solar Now?

Getting a solar system installed now will lock you into NEM 2.0 for 20 years. This grandfather clause protects you from any reduction in benefits announced in NEM 3.0. In other words, your return on investment in solar panels is protected from any future changes in policy.

To get a detailed breakdown of what getting solar panels looks like financially — including return of investment, payback period, and monthly costs and savings —

Smart thermostats and a Time-of-Use rate plan can help you lower your energy use and bills while heating or cooling your home during a time when energy demand and prices are lower. Some smart thermostats include time-of-use optimization that automatically preheats or precools your home during off peak hours- no programming required. For a limited time, PG&E has increased the Rebate amount up to $120 for qualifying smart thermostats when you also sign up for a Time-of-Use rate plan. Visit PGE.COM for more information.
