NEM 3.0 IS NOT GOOD

Go Solar with NEM 2.0 while the getting is good. Your home will be Grandfathered into NEM 2.0 for 15- 20 years!

* 12/2021 - CPUC PRELIM DECISION:

- 1) Instead of energy credits of up to $.62 / kilowatt hour we are currently receiving, NEM 3 suggests credits of $.05
- 2) Instead of the current $10- $11 monthly minimal distribution fees to buy and sell energy to PG&E, NEM 3 Tariff is suggesting $8 per kW minimal fee. This would mean an average of over $50 a month
- 3) They want to RENEGE 5 YEARS FROM OUR 20 YEARS GRANDFATHER PLAN!

NEM 3 UPDATE:

As of their deadline of September 29, 2022, nothing final yet. CPUC rules state that a proposed decision must be released within 90 days of the close of the record, which in the NEM proceeding was July 1.

While we are expecting a slight modification, it is believed that if Governor Newsome was siding with solar, we would have heard mention during his pre-election campaign.

Consensus is that decision is made, but being kept private until the election is over.

What are the most important aspects of an excellent solar experience?

More Energy In Less Space

2 OPPOSITE CHOICES: BEST vs. CHEAPEST

MOUNTING HARDWARE will provide the greatest PEACE OF MIND for roof integrity long term.

RAISED FLASHING MOUNTS

Designed for the ultimate long-term roof protection. It would take an inch of constant rain just to get to the point providing security.

WHY NOT GO CHEAP?

Mount above has no flashing protecting the the roof. Over time, the granules wear down and water will seep in underneath the mount.

They know what they're are doing which makes it easy to deal with them.

communication was frequent during our project, and if we had any questions, they ensured it was addressed immediately. After installing our panels, they stayed in close contact to ensure we were satisfied. Furthermore, they scheduled time to review the solar functionality

From our first appointment to installation, to our most recent one year electric bill review they have been on point with customer service.
